Research Experience

Intergenerational Mobility in Iran with Mohammad Hoseini	MAs Thesis
---	------------

This study describes three features of intergenerational mobility in Iran based on administrative records on the labor income of more than three million sons and their fathers. To begin with, we characterize the joint distribution of incomes earned by fathers and sons at the national level. The conditional expectation of son income given father income is linear in percentile rank. On average, a 10-percentile increase in a father's income is associated with a 3.7-percentile increase in a son's income. Furthermore, intergenerational mobility in Iran varies widely between provinces. For instance, among sons starting from a family in the bottom quantile, a son in Isfahan reaches a percentile rank of 29, whereas, in North Khorasan, he reaches a percentile rank of 47. Lastly, we examine a factor associated with mobility. The Gini index is correlated negatively with mobility across provinces in Iran.

Selected Course Projects

1. Under The Tyranny of a Policy: Exchange rate subsidy under the Rouhani administration.
Exploiting the impact of essential and basic commodities' subsidy on the evolution of prices using Instrumented-Diff-in-Diff. Found 52% increases in the price indexes during six months and a 4Kg drop in consumption as a welfare loss.

4. The pandemic effect on students' preference: A case study of Sharif university.
We estimated the impact of the educational factors on the students' preferences and asked whether they support online platforms or in-person education. We used a survey provided by Sharif-daily magazine, which included over 800 volunteer participants. We found that more educated participants tend to choose e-learning over traditional one, controlling for the status of the field and faculty of the departments.
